Character Backstory & Notes

Appearance

A dashing Satyr with sleek ram horns, clad in polished plate armor adorned with small silver ivy leaf emblems. He possesses a warm, charming smile and carries a well-crafted wooden pan flute at his belt. His shield is painted with a silver sunburst surrounded by grapevines, symbolizing both his devotion and his fey heritage.

Personality

Valiant, gregarious, and deeply joyful. Valerius believes that justice should be upheld with a song and a smile, and that protecting the weak is the highest and most noble form of performance. He is quick to offer a tune to cheer up a weary traveler, but just as quick to draw his moon-touched longsword if evildoers threaten the innocent.

Allies & Organizations

- The Gilded Ivy Troupe: A traveling band of bards, actors, and acrobats who took Valerius in when he first arrived in the Material Plane. They remain close friends, and he frequently performs with them when their paths cross.
- The Order of the Gilded Leaf: A small, localized order of Paladins and Rangers dedicated to protecting border towns and trade roads from fey incursions and monstrous threats. They value both chivalry and harmony with nature.

Backstory (Planar Envoy)

Born in the vibrant, shifting groves of the Feywild, Valerius was chosen early by the Court of the Archfey to serve as a diplomat and messenger—a Planar Envoy. Armed with letters of introduction and a glowing cosmic token, he traveled the planes, negotiating borders between the Seelie Court and various planar lords, walking the portals of Sigil, and speaking with celestial archons.

These journeys exposed him to the fragility of the Material Plane and the heavy toll of planar incursions. Inspired by the legends of mortal knights who swore oaths to protect the weak, he knelt before an altar of the morning sun and took the Oath of Devotion. As an emissary to the Material Plane, he now travels the land, carrying out his diplomatic duties while defending the innocent with his shield, song, and moon-touched blade.
